Explain, delve and unpack the following texts:

“Most people live life on the path we set for them. Too afraid to explore any other. But once in a while, people like you come along who knock down all the obstacles we put in your way. People who realize free will is a gift you’ll never know how to use until you fight for it.”

This text suggests that many individuals follow a predetermined path in life, constrained by fear and reluctance to explore alternatives. It acknowledges rare individuals, like the reader, who challenge and overcome obstacles, recognizing that true freedom requires a struggle for one's own free will. The message encourages embracing the challenges that come with asserting independence and choice in life.

The passage implies a critique of conformity and encourages a deeper examination of one's choices. It suggests that societal expectations often limit people, but those who question and challenge these norms discover the true value of free will. The reference to "knocking down obstacles" implies a resilience to societal constraints, and the idea of fighting for free will implies an active, conscious effort to shape one's destiny. Overall, it champions the pursuit of individual autonomy and self-discovery.
